SOUTH BRONX TO EVERYWHERE.

The story

It is in the Melrose section of the South Bronx where you will find 8waves: a rising counter-culture voice shaped by a district where nearly half the population lives below the poverty line. He senses change arriving as gentrification turns the mainland borough into a new hotspot while threatening to displace its longest-tenured residents.

The Bronx once burned. Nearly half of it was decimated, and the fallout became a defining challenge for the generations that followed. Navigating violent, drug-infested neighborhoods can take a toll on the senses; at night, street corners become a backdrop for people who could no longer hold out hope.

Influenced by the social tenacity of artists before him, 8waves formed Weathermen Collective: an assembly of free thinkers, artists, and creators using their resources to create change without surrendering identity in struggling neighborhoods. Music became both document and motion - a way to carry the Bronx forward without sanding down its edges.
